

Check out adaptive technology for free for 90 days

PROVAIL Pacific Northwest Adaptive Technology Library

What is Adaptive Technology

Adaptive technology (AT) is any item, equipment piece, software program, or product system that is used to increase, maintain, or improve the day-to-day access of persons with disabilities.

The PNW Adaptive Technology Experience

The PNW Adaptive Library is a resource for individuals with disabilities to gain access to a multitude of adaptive equipment that they can try at home for up to 90 days. These items can be for function or for play. The adjustable gameplay devices are crucial in allowing folks the chance to experience fun.

Users who participate in this program have found creative improvements in their day-to-day functions and have built newfound skills.

THE FIRST LENDING LIBRARY OF ITS KIND IN WASHINGTON STATE

PROVAIL, in partnership with the University of Washington's HuskyADAPT program and the Taskar Center for Accessible Technology, created The Adaptive Technology Lending Library. This resource gives individuals with disabilities access to hundreds of assistive technology devices, tools, and equipment to customize, integrate, and ensure inclusivity and ease.
